COMPARATIVE STUDY

OF

COMPILED NATIONAL LEGISLATION IN FORCE

ON

MARINE SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH

This Document was prepared by Dr. Alberto Szekely, an IOC Consultant, as part of the work being undertaken by the Commission, in co-operation with the UN Law of the Sea Secretariat, to compile national legislation on marine scientific research in zones under national jurisdiction, as decided by the Executive Council, at its Fourteenth Session, and endorsed by the Assembly at its Twelfth Session.

A detailed and exhaustive review of the compiled national legislative instruments in force on law of the sea matters, from among a total of 130 States, allowed the detection of 78 States which, in a greater or lesser degree, have adopted some type of legal provisions or regulations referring, in general or specifically, to scientific research activities within their marine zones of national jurisdiction.

As a methodological tool, a Table was prepared in order to classify those countries which have some kind of legal provisions in the field, including the title of the legislative instrument in question and its date of publication. Those instruments were classified in accordance to the concrete marine zone of national jurisdiction where the respective provisions apply, and printing an asterik next to those who make reference to activities by foreigners and two asteriks next to those who do not.

Among the 78 States thus classified it was found that:

1. In the Territorial Sea, 12 States regulate specifically marine scientific research activities. Of those 12 States, 8 regulate activities undertaken by foreigners and 3 do not make any reference to them at all.

2. In the Exclusive Economic Zone, 47 States regulate or have claimed their jurisdiction over marine scientific research. Only 4 of them make a specific reference to activities undertaken by foreigners.

3. In the Continental Shelf, 33 States regulate or have claimed their jurisdiction over marine scientific research, of which only 6 make reference to activities undertaken by foreigners.

4. A general section in the Table includes those States which exercise their jurisdiction over marine scientific research activities indistinctly, in their different marine zones of national jurisdiction, that is to say, which have claimed such jurisdiction in general over marine scientific research, but without defining specifically the zone of application of that jurisdiction. Only 4 of the 6 States thus classified, referred to activities by foreigners.

5. It was possible to detect 23 States which have legislative instruments regulating fishing with scientific research purposes, only 9 of which refer to those undertaken by foreigners.

6. Among the 9 States which have an exclusive fishing zone, 5 of them regulate the scientific research undertaken by foreigners in that zone.

As it can be appreciated, the classification by itself yields a general panorama as to which is, at the moment, the pattern of practice by States in the matter. Above all, the classification facilitates a schematic appreciation of that State Practice, which shows that the amount of national legislation to regulate foreign marine scientific research, is quite pure indeed. Even the number of States who have legislated on marine scientific research in general is definitely modest.

The results of this preliminary analysis give a clear indication as to the enormous dimension of the legislative task still facing coastal States, if they are to derive from the Convention all the benefits they can obtain from their provisions. Those provisions, being too general in nature, are undoubtedly not enough for their full and adequate implementation and, therefore, the adoption of domestic legislation is clearly required.
